

President's Message

2009-2010

Debra Carioti, Psy.D.

Let me welcome you to the Chicago Association of Psychoanalytic Psychology (CAPP) website. Whether you are a member of our organization and familiar with CAPP, or someone seeking information about CAPP or psychoanalytic theory and treatment, I am glad that we can “meet” in this space.

You will find here information about upcoming conferences, continuing education opportunities, and peer study groups, all of which are intended for your personal and professional enrichment as well as to foster conversation and learning among us. If you are a student or professional in the early stages of your career, CAPP has groups especially designed to support your development and your exploration of psychoanalytic thought and process. If you are a member, you have access to our directory and listserv. It is my hope that listserv “conversations” will become a valued way of staying connected to and getting to know each other better between face-to-face gatherings.

On this website, you will find a listing of the officers, councilors, and committee chairs of our organization, every one of whom would gladly answer any questions you might have or help you find someone who can. We have an attitude of “the more, the merrier” in CAPP – the more of us that gather to share our knowledge, experiences, perspectives, and questions, the richer is our world, and the more connected we feel to colleagues and friends. Having found your way to our website, please invite other interested individuals to join us here and in membership. If I can be of any assistance, please do contact me at dacario@sbcglobal.net. If we haven't yet met each other, I hope that will happen soon.
